

Mindfulness Matters

Mindfulness is a word and a concept commonly used in medicine and involves any practice that cultivates connection and awareness of the present moment. Mindfulness – which yields more than 4,000 citations in PubMed – occurs while disengaging oneself from strong attachment to beliefs, thoughts or emotions, resulting in a greater sense of emotional balance and well-being.

For patients experiencing chronic pain, affect disorders, menopausal hot flashes, obesity, diabetes¹ and other painful disorders, the value of mindfulness is immeasurable. For physicians and providers, the merits of mindfulness include improved engagement – with colleagues and patients – and greater compassion. Recent data suggests mindfulness may also play an important role in optimizing clinical outcomes and in reducing medical errors.

The value of mindfulness has similarly been looked at as a preventive tool against burnout. Although burnout is an epidemic in many professions, as physicians we are clearly overrepresented. A study from the Mayo Clinic estimated that 54 percent of physicians are affected by burnout. A recent survey of our medical staff confirms similar statistics.

Practicing mindfulness promotes wellness and resilience – two qualities that are protective against burnout. One of the challenges is how to effectively incorporate mindfulness into a daily routine. Consider these resources to bring mindfulness into your life:

- Participate in a mindfulness-based stress reduction course (MBSR). Initiated in 2001, LVHN's program is one of the longest-established in the country. Co-developed by Susan Wiley in the Department of Psychiatry, the program has provided MBSR training to more than 1,500 individuals. The program teaches participants to learn to stay in the present moment, respond rather than react and experience a greater sense of calm and well-being. Kristin Friel, MD, of LVPG Obstetrics and Gynecology—1245 Cedar Crest, and many other clinicians in our network, have completed this course. She describes the course as one of the most meaningful and valuable experiences in her personal and professional life. Although the program requires a nine-week commitment and a nominal fee, it is covered by Culture of Wellness dollars for LVPG providers, and Medical Staff Services will gladly reimburse non-LVPG medical staff members who want to participate in the course.
- Download a mindfulness-meditation app. Technology offers creative and accessible tools to help promote daily mindfulness. Based on a recommendation from Matt McCambridge, MD, our Chief Quality Officer, I recently subscribed to Headspace. This is a downloadable app that helps people learn to meditate in only 10 minutes a day. Meditating using this app has greatly enriched my life, as it has for Matt, who has tallied nearly 400 hours of meditation over the past three years. Similar apps that have received positive reviews include The Mindfulness App, Omvana, and Stop, Breath & Think, which can similarly be used as adjuncts in developing your own personal mindfulness program.
- Subscription to the Daily Motivator. Thanks to the recommendation of Amy Smith, PhD, in the Department of Education, I connect with the Daily Motivator website messages daily. These posts are only a few sentences and take about a minute to read. They focus on simple themes that promote thoughtfulness while providing inspiration and motivation. The website also emphasizes the importance of positivity, compassion for self and others, and the value of investing in oneself. The complete site offers access to several other resources, including videos that promote inner peace and introspection.

Mindfulness is a simple concept. I have touched on a few of the many benefits it can have in one's life. The journey toward mindfulness, however, requires engagement, practice and action. Feel free to use one of the options I've reviewed in your journey.

In future Progress Notes editions, we will focus on other ways we as a medical staff can stay healthy through a monthly column – “The Wellness Corner.” Please let us know strategies you've adopted to stay healthy and well which that we may be able to share. If you have any suggestions for how Medical Staff Services can continue to make LVHN a healthier place to practice medicine, please share those as well.

Medical Staff Integration Succeeding at LVH–Hazleton

The first day Jayme Lieberman, MD, MBA, drove into the parking lot at Lehigh Valley Hospital (LVH)–Hazleton as its new Vice Chair of the Department of Surgery, he wasn't sure what to expect.

"I walked in there cold," says Lieberman of that day last August. "I hadn't met any of the surgical staff previously."

In his new position, Lieberman was asked to facilitate integration between the surgical staffs of LVH and LVH–Hazleton at a location where there was a need for surgeons, as well as to accelerate quality and efficiency initiatives. Medical Staff Services leadership joined Michael Pasquale, MD, FACS, LVH's Senior Medical Director and the Anne and Carl Anderson Distinguished Chair in Surgery, in determining someone of Lieberman's skill and leadership abilities would be the perfect conduit to directing these integration efforts on-site.

"Dr. Lieberman is a respected surgeon who had shown interest in getting involved with the administrative aspects of surgery and quality," Pasquale says. "We saw him as an excellent choice in terms of working with the President and Senior Medical Director at LVH–Hazleton as we focus on strategic growth and addressing the needs of our staff there."

From that first day, Lieberman has been warmly received. "It's challenging to walk into what has been a well-functioning hospital for decades trying to initiate change," Lieberman says. "But the leadership here and everybody on the team has been totally engaged in the process from the beginning."

That process continues to be a work in progress, Lieberman says. It's quite a task to standardize care delivery, integrate systems and increase inter-hospital collaboration, all while attempting to become more efficient, eliminate waste and reduce costs.

"Our main goal is to provide patients in this community the same access to care they would get at LVH in Allentown or Muhlenberg," Lieberman says. "There's no quick fix in a situation like this, but I can tell you we're getting there."

Joseph Patruno, MD, Medical Staff President, hopes the model Lieberman and Pasquale have created for Hazleton can be used elsewhere as Lehigh Valley Health Network continues to grow.

“I could see this model as something of real value in departments which lack staff or leadership,” Patruno says. “When a provider of Dr. Lieberman’s standing is willing to travel and become part of a hospital community such as Hazleton’s, it could well provide a foundation for physician recruitment and growth of clinical service lines. We’re looking to bring about a sense of pride and trust in LVHN at all of our hospitals, and this is a great start.”

LVHN Dental Department Conducts 'Give Kids a Smile Day'

Eight-year-old Uyen Ly was all smiles as she strolled into the dental clinic at Lehigh Valley Hospital (LVH)–Muhlenberg on Feb. 23 with her father, Phuong, for her first-ever dental appointment. Even her sweater matched the occasion: SMILE – it spelled in a variety of colors.

Dentist Christopher Low, DMD, and dental assistant Susan Chaikowsky gave Ly an oral exam, cleaned and polished her teeth, took X-rays and applied fluoride to them. They made the experience easy, painless and even fun for their patient, who smiled throughout her visit.

Ly, a second-grader from Allentown, was one of 25 kids from the community who received free dental care at the annual "Give Kids a Smile Day," sponsored by LVHN for the past 13 years. The dental clinic at LVH–17th Street held its day Feb. 3, providing care to 18 low-income children. The total value of free care provided by LVHN over the life of the program exceeds $202,000.

Recently, the program gained national attention with a photo of dental resident Helen Pham and two young patients at the LVH–17th Street clinic that was published in the February edition of the American Dental Association magazine.

"Our dentists volunteer their time at the clinic to provide services that sometimes get pushed to the back burner by families when things are difficult economically," says dentist Michele Pisano-Marsh, DMD, who runs the clinic at LVH–Muhlenberg. "In addition to the free care we give, we become their 'dental home' for all their lives. It's part of our community service."

This was Mason Bisher's first time at the clinic as well. Accompanied by his mother, Domilys Rosario, the 2-year old was initially shy but soon warmed up to dentist Steven Fenstermacher, DMD, and dental assistant Ruth Usino as they treated him like a celebrity and encouraged him during his treatment.

"You're doing so good," Fenstermacher told him. "You're teeth look great!"

Besides healthy teeth, the real payoff for Bisher was the Beanie Baby stuffed toy he picked out of a gift bag after his appointment for being such a stellar patient.

LVH-Schuylkill, LVHN Medical Staffs Vote 'Yes' To Merger

The medical staff of Lehigh Valley Hospital (LVH)–Schuylkill East Norwegian Street and South Jackson Street has joined the Lehigh Valley Health Network (LVHN) medical staff in voting to approve the merging of staffs during simultaneous general medical staff meetings held at the East Norwegian Street site, LVH–Cedar Crest and Valley Country Club in Sugarloaf, Pa., on March 13.

The positive staff merger vote now moves to the individual boards of trustees for LVH, LVH–Muhlenberg, LVH–Hazleton and LVH–Schuylkill for final approval.

Upon that approval, the LVH–Schuylkill merger would add 181 clinicians to the 1,551-member LVHN medical staff, which currently includes LVH–Cedar Crest, LVH–Muhlenberg and LVH–Hazleton. The LVH–Hazleton medical staff officially joined the LVHN medical staff in November.

The hope is the medical staff of LVH-Pocono can be included sometime later in the year.

New! Surgery Videos by America's Top Doctors in AccessSurgery

Intended for practicing surgeons, instructors, residents and medical students, AccessSurgery is an integrated online resource organized around the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education (ACGME) mandate for a Core Curriculum. Its content includes 25 searchable textbooks, including some with video content, clerkship resources, and a database of more than 16,000 images including downloadable slides and tools for residency directors.

Videos from JoMI (Journal of Medical Insight), a Boston-based peer-reviewed surgical video journal, are now featured in the AccessSurgery multimedia content. JoMI works with top surgeons at hospitals including Massachusetts General Hospital, Brigham and Women's Hospital, Berlin's Charite Hospital, Duke Medical Center and others to publish high quality, professionally filmed surgical cases. Each video-article is narrated by the surgeon and includes a text article detailing the procedure, along with supplementary materials (in-video highlights, animation, imaging, patient overview, etc.). The journal's current focus is on general surgery, orthopedics, orthopedic trauma, neurosurgery, and head and neck surgery.

The first release, Laparoscopic Gastric Wedge Resection, a procedure with less mortality risk that allows shortened recovery time and requires only a 24-hour postoperative stay, is performed by Martin Goodman, MD, and was filmed at Tufts Medical Center in Boston. Goodman, a surgical oncologist, has been listed as one of America's Top Doctors four years in a row. Additional videos from JoMI's growing compendium are scheduled to be added soon.

Some other video sources include:

- Essential Surgery, an interactive program to introduce basic surgical concepts and techniques to the medical student. Each learning module is grouped by region for ease of study. Numerous videos, images and definitions comprise each module, giving context to the topic.
- Schwartz's Principles of Surgery, 8th Edition
- Surgical animations: Adapted from Zollinger's Atlas of Surgical Operations, 8th Edition

New! Surgery Videos by America's Top Doctors in AccessSurgery - Lehigh Valley Health Network - A Passion For Better Medicine

- Exploring Essential Radiology helps medical students and residents develop their imaging interpretation skills in various modalities as well as various anatomical regions.
- Patient Safety modules introduce core concepts of patient safety in an interactive and self-paced learning environment including three modules: Handwashing, Understanding Error, and Communication Concepts.
- Videos from Cardiac Surgery in the Adult, 4th Edition

Generic Drug Update

Generic medications are biologically equal to the brand name “innovator” drug in dosage form, safety, strength, quality, administration route, and intended use. They are typically a more affordable option which can lead to increased patient compliance.

The following medications are now available generically:

- Emend (aprepitant)
- Tamiflu Capsules (oseltamivir)
- EpiPen and EpiPen Jr (epinephrine)
- Patanol Ophthalmic Drops (olopatadine)
- Pristiq (desvenlafaxine)
- Zetia (ezetimibe)

The following medications should be available generically in 2017:

- Relpax (eletriptan)
- Pataday Ophthalmic Drops (olopatadine)
- Proair HFA (albuterol sulfate)
- Vytorin (ezetimibe/simvastatin)
- Strattera (atomoxetine)
- Viagra (sildenafil)
