Saluting Our Veterans

Nov. 25, 1976 is a day Sarah and Larry Krick will never forget. Their Thanksgiving dinner ended with a surprise announcement from their only child, Tom, a high-school junior: he planned to join the Navy following graduation. "I cried, prayed and did everything I could to change his mind," Sarah says. "We had lost our other two children as infants. That's what made it so hard."

Tom, now a registered nurse in LVHN's behavioral health department, eventually won over his parents and served two decades as a submarine sonar technician before heading to nursing school. "I saw the Navy as a way to do something special with my life," he says. Krick (pictured above with his parents) was among the veteran colleagues who participated in our Veteran's Day celebration, held Tuesday at Lehigh Valley Hospital-Cedar Crest.

The ceremony was simulcast to LVH-Muhlenberg, LVH-17th Street, LVH-Hazleton and LVHN-Mack Boulevard. More than 500 colleagues – including 68 veterans – gathered at these five sites to thank those who served or are still serving in our armed forces. President and chief executive officer Brian Nester, DO, MBA, FACOEP, an Army Reserves veteran, opened the ceremony by declaring Nov. 11 "a day to celebrate and honor all living veterans."

Nester also thanked representatives from our partner organizations in a regional veteran health care initiative. The group held a press conference later in the day to announce its readiness to support a new Department of Veterans Affairs patient-centered community care program.

After a formal posting of colors, five veteran colleagues joined in a musical tribute to the armed forces by proudly posting the flags of their respective service branches: Rhonda Moore (Army); Krick (Navy); Kalman Illyes (Coast Guard); Frank Capoccia (Air Force); and Bill Matthews (Marines).

Continuing the flag theme, children from the pre-kindergarten class at LVHN's Early Childhood Education Center charmed the crowd with a rousing rendition of "You're a Grand Old Flag." The children closed the celebration by shouting out words of praise and support that began with each of the letters in "Grateful."

Grateful also describes Sarah Krick's attitude toward the men and women who serve our country.

"It was certainly difficult not having our son around all those years, but it was well worth it," she says. "Because of Tom and so many others like him, we still enjoy our freedom. Without them out there, where would we be?"

All Americans can be thankful that question will never need an answer.

Wellness Wednesday – Holiday Recipe Makeovers

The holidays are here, which means that it's time for family gatherings, office parties – and tons of guilt-inducing goodies. If you find it impossible to resist traditional favorites like cookies, pie, potato filling and gravy, then indulge in moderation, says family medicine physician Linda Loffredo, MD, of Lehigh Valley Health Network.

"Losing 5 pounds after the holidays is not overly difficult," Loffredo says. "But losing 20 pounds after a month-long free-for-all is far more daunting. Be aware of the calorie content of what's offered and make smart choices."

This week's wellness challenge: Try substituting some of your favorite unhealthy ingredients with healthier alternatives.

You don't have to forego grandma's famous pumpkin cheesecake. Get creative instead. "Often it takes just a few tweaks," says health network dietitian Heather Johnson.

Unless indicated otherwise, use the same amount of the substitute ingredient.

Recipe calls for:	Use instead:
Oil	Applesauce
Butter	Half butter and half applesauce or prune puree
Cream	Low-fat cottage cheese pureed until smooth
cheese	Fat-free half-and-half or evaporated skim milk
Cream	2 egg whites
1 egg	Sugar substitute, or use half the sugar suggested and add vanilla or
Sugar	cinnamon to intensify sweetness
(granulated)

Johnson recommends making only one or two substitutions at a time. Get used to subtle differences in taste and texture, and then change something else, if necessary. "Be brave and experiment," she says. And don't forget to watch your portion sizes. Updated recipes may be better for you, but reduced fat and calories still add up.

If you don't have the time – or courage – to experiment on your own, speak with a dietitian. Your dietitians can take any recipe and show you how to reduce fat, salt, sugar and calories to better suit your nutritional goals. "The new version may not taste exactly like grandma's, yet it still can be delicious," Johnson says. Better yet, it will be healthier for your family. And that's a tradition any grandmother would love.

Walking the Epic Walk: Workflow Walkthrough for Wave 2

Winter is knocking at our door, but last week the Lehigh Valley Health Network (LVHN) Epic transformation team spent a day looking forward to next summer as they presented workflow walkthroughs for Wave 2 (inpatient settings). Wave 2 is scheduled to golive with our new electronic medical record (EMR) on August 1, 2015.

Workflow walkthroughs showcase applications that will be used when the Epic EMR is implemented. "It's an exciting day for us to present Epic as we interpret it and built it," says Michael Sheinberg, MD, project lead for LVHN Epic. "This customization has been done with the input and validation of many LVHN subject matter experts and provider champions."

Several hundred LVHN colleagues attended sessions held at Lehigh Valley Hospital (LVH)-Cedar Crest and broadcast to LVH-17th Street, LVH-Muhlenberg and LVHN-Mack Blvd. locations. Presentations were also recorded and will be available for viewing in the next week.

Throughout the day, LVHN colleagues presented individual workflows associated with: ASAP –emergency module

Stork - obstetrics/labor and delivery module

ADT – admission-discharge-transfer module

OpTime – perioperative services module

Radiant – radiology module

Willow – pharmacy module

Resolute HB (Hospital Billing) - hospital billing module

Walking Along with "Patient Paul"

Additionally, two sessions were presented to highlight how patient information flows into a patient's medical record and how that same information is available from one encounter to the next. For these sessions, Wave 2 colleagues used several Epic modules that came in to play during the care of single patient, "Paul Appleseed". Appleseed entered our system at the LVH-Muhlenberg emergency department with pain in the lower right abdomen. Instead of waiting in a line, he is seen by the emergency department (ED) triage nurse, Brandi Mcmillian, RN. "Using my badge to log-in (Tap and Go functionality), I arrive Mr. Appleseed and make sure he doesn't have an existing record in our system. Then I go to the 'Triage' navigator and document his chief complaint, allergies, review home medications and chart his vital signs," she says.

While Appleseed waits for the ED provider to see him, the emergency department registrar completes information about who the patient wants to be notified about his care, as well as checks on guarantor or insurance information (which can be confirmed with a 'click'.) The patient also can sign a HIPAA form using an e-signature pad that is integrated into the EMR.

Transitioning from ED to OR

Soon, Appleseed's care moves to the physician. "When I select the patient's name, I can review the summary report from the triage nurse," says emergency department physician David Richardson, MD. "The ASAP complaint-based templates have been modified by our subject matter experts to guide and remind providers to ask the right questions at the right time." A complete history is often the key to the correct diagnosis.

Soon, it is confirmed that Appleseed has appendicitis and requires emergency surgery. His case information transitions to the OpTime module which follows a patient from pre-op to intra-op to post-op. When he is out of surgery, patient logistics moves into action and identifies where Appleseed will room.

Discharge Details

As the walkthrough continues, the patient is ready to be discharged, which means additional cues from the EMR come into play. "The system requires medication reconciliation and discharge instructions to be taken care of," says Bob (Rovinder) Sandhu, MD. "I can use SmartSets to select general surgical discharge instructions about diet, activity and signs of infection the patient should be aware of."

The discharging nurse will also see "Best Practice Advisory" alerts that can be reviewed prior to patient departure, and will also have an opportunity to help the patient sign-up for MyLVHN, the patient portal.

The integrated sessions compressed a multi-day patient stay into 90-minutes, but thoroughly demonstrated how each Epic module is integrated into the whole EMR system. "It's one system, one database," says Sheinberg. "As providers, it improves communication about the needs of our patients throughout the network, from the first point of contact to the last. It's truly a transformation, and one we are excited to bring to colleagues at LVHN and the people of our community."
