Lehigh Valley Physician Group (LVPG) Practices to Change Names, Implement Epic in 2015

This message is from Michael Rossi, MD, MBA, president, Lehigh Valley Physician Group (LVPG); Jim Demopoulos, senior vice president, LVPG operations; Michael Sheinberg, MD, Epic project medical director, and Emily Greene, brand manager, marketing and public affairs

Starting in the new year, we will be making it easier for community members to identify the practices affiliated with Lehigh Valley Physician Group (LVPG). That's why we will introduce a new naming convention for all LVPG practices.

These names will follow a standard format: LVPG, followed by the specialty, followed by the location. To find the new name for our practices, please see the attached list, visit LVHN.org/lvpg or call 610-402-CARE. Please share the attached list with your colleagues – or post it prominently at your workstation or within your department.

Please note that these name changes will be phased in, and you may see communications that include a practice's old name and its new name. This will give our patients time to adjust and will help us fully transition to our new identity.

LVPG includes more than 1,000 providers, more than 140 practices and 45 specialties. It includes neonatal care to pediatrics, primary care including family and internal medicine and women's health, through just about every specialty and subspecialty you or someone you care about may require. Our name change reflects our commitment to care for people in the Lehigh Valley and beyond throughout every stage of life.

Another part of that commitment is giving our patients access to personal health information. It's why Lehigh Valley Health Network (LVHN) and LVPG are transitioning to Epic. This new electronic medical record will transform our current multiple systems into one single, integrated system that communicates broadly and easily throughout our network of hospitals and providers. With Epic:

- You'll tell your story once – Over the next year your medical history will be available across the spectrum of care providers you see at LVHN and LVPG.
- It's secure – Only health care providers authorized to see your information will have access to that information.
- You're a participant – You will have access to your personal health information through our new, user-friendly patient portal called MyLVHN. You can use MyLVHN to review information from past appointments, check your immunization record, request a prescription refill or send a secure, non-urgent message to your care team, all from the convenience of your internet-connected mobile phone, tablet or computer. In the near future, you also will be able to schedule an appointment with your primary care provider directly through MyLVHN.

We will implement Epic in LVPG practices starting February 18, 2015.

While we are making these changes, the things that really matter to our patients will remain the same. We are the same physicians, health care providers, clinical and office staff who have been privileged to be with you. We are your partners when it comes to your health and the health of those you love.

Extended Partnership with Pocono Medical Center

This message is from Tom Whalen, MD, Chief Medical Officer

In keeping with our practice to inform you about new developments involving our health network I am announcing that LVHN is extending its partnership with Pocono Medical Center (PMC). In addition to the existing program relationships we have with PMC for trauma, interventional radiology and child safety, we are beginning a new clinical affiliation with their Dale and Frances Hughes Cancer Center.

Details are provided in the following news release which is being sent to the media later today:

Pocono Medical Center's Dale and Frances Hughes Cancer Center Announces New Clinical Affiliation with Lehigh Valley Health Network

Dr. Michael Greenberg Announces Plans to Step Down as Cancer Center Medical Director

East Stroudsburg, PA, December 19, 2014 – Pocono Medical Center announced today that it is entering into a new agreement with Lehigh Valley Health Network (LVHN) to provide medical director and professional services for Radiation Oncology at the Dale and Frances Hughes Cancer Center. Patients will be cared for by the physicians who provide radiation oncology services at the LVHN cancer centers in Allentown and Bethlehem.

The new affiliation follows the decision by Michael Greenberg, MD, who has been medical director at the cancer center since 1988, to step down, effective Feb. 28.

LVHN's physicians are experienced in all aspects of radiation therapy, have a history of receiving strong patient satisfaction scores and quality outcomes. Their leadership has produced consistent quality and innovation at LVHN and will help Pocono Medical Center's radiation oncology program continue expanding its services.

Jeff Snyder, Pocono Medical Center president and CEO, said, "We are excited about this new affiliation with the highly-respected Lehigh Valley Health Network, which will continue to serve area residents with world-class cancer care."

Mr. Snyder added, "We are most grateful to Dr. Greenberg for his many contributions to our cancer center and our patients. We wish him much continued success."

Dr. Greenberg, said, "After 26 years of helping to build what has become a world-class cancer center, it is time to move on to a new challenge. We have accomplished much in these two-and-a half decades, and I am proud of having played a part in developing this important service to the community."

LVHN will begin providing services on March 1, 2015 and will be working closely with Dr. Greenberg and our oncology team to provide a seamless transition of care.

Orthopedic Surgery at LVHN: Meet Prodomos Ververeli, MD – VIDEO

When Prodomos Ververeli, MD, was on the high school football team, he played six games with a broken hand, hiding the injury from his parents so he wouldn't miss the action on the field.

Injuries like that one inspired him to become a board-certified orthopedic surgeon. Now he's one of the leading surgeons in the region in his specialty, performing more than 600 joint replacements a year.

In this video, Ververeli speaks to how gratifying it is to see patients who were in wheelchairs before surgery, able to walk unaided after knee or hip replacement.

"The days that really get me is when I'm seeing patients in the office, especially the first or second month after surgery, and you get the random hug of someone tearing up and saying, 'Thank you for giving me my life back and letting me do the things I want to do.'"

Wellness Wednesday – Avoid the ‘Workout Blues’

Do you tend to start and abandon exercise programs more often than Taylor Swift writes songs about her ex-boyfriends? If so, try these tips from Lehigh Valley Health Network family medicine physician Amy Miller, DO, with Valley Family Medical Center, and exercise physiologist Kelsey Coates, with LVHN Fitness.

- Get fit for you (not for the scale). Sometimes even if you have a successful week – say working out five days in a row – the scale can be stubborn, which can cause you to be discouraged. If instead you remind yourself of the other benefits you feel – stronger bones, more energy, a better mood – you’ll be more successful. “Your overall goal should be a healthier you, mentally, physically and spiritually,” Miller says.
- Do an activity you enjoy. Exercise shouldn’t be a drag. Try classes such as Zumba or meet friends for a walk or run. “Even ballroom dancing or active playing with your children can help your personal quest for wellness,” Coates says.
- Don’t look at the person (or machine) next to you. It’s too easy to get “exercise envy.” So if you think someone looks fitter than you, or if their numbers on the treadmill are better than yours, ignore it. “Celebrate your personal goals instead,” Miller says. Give yourself a checkmark or sticker every time you make it to the gym. Then, after earning a set number, reward yourself with a relaxing massage or another prize.

Happy New Epic Year!

Way back in 2013 when Lehigh Valley Health Network (LVHN) leaders announced we were ready to transform our electronic medical record systems (EMR) into one integrated system, "Epic go-live day" was but a dream in the distance. Fast forward to the start of 2015, and it's incredible realizing we are less than 50 days away from launching our brand new Epic EMR system and new patient portal on February 18.

Training Resolutions

Wave 1 training begins next week (January 5), and since resolutions are the name of the game in January, here are a few for those ready to begin their LVHN Epic training:

- Finish prerequisite elearnings on The Learning Curve (TLC) before the first day of class
- Print training materials you want to reference or take notes on. Find those materials on this Sharepoint page: Epic Transformation Resources Shared Documents page for Training Documents or link from the Epic Transformation intranet resources page.
- Know where to park for training. Check out our Mission Central story, Everything You Always Wanted to Know about Epic Parking and the Epic Parking flyer for Dec. 30 through Jan. 11.

Go-Live Support Who's Who

Wave 1 go-live on February 18 will be supported by a number of people – with some key players right in ambulatory practices. Here's a list of who will be on-site offering Go-Live Support:

Super users: Wave 1 super users just wrapped up advance LVHN Epic training in December and will attend end user training in January. Super users were selected by their practices because of their ability to help others understand new and different concepts, their knowledge about workflow processes, and last but not least, their outgoing and friendly personalities. These super users will work with their colleagues in their practices to offer help and assistance at-the-elbow on go-live day and beyond.

Provider site champions: Nearly every practice has selected a provider site champion, (their titles range from LVPG practice leaders and provider subject matter experts to Chairs, Assistant/Associate Medical Directors and other providers with administrative/non-clinical time.) Provider site champions will support their peers during go-live and optimization and will also provide colleague support for Personalization Labs where users can tailor LVHN Epic to their individual needs.

Another go-live support role that will be fulfilled by super users and provider site champions is the "super nova user." A super nova user is an extension to the super user program and will help with rapid communication needs. During a work shift, one super user or provider site champion will carry a pager. The LVHN Epic team will alert the
