Hospital Pharmacist Named Tops In State

Howard Cook, Jr., R Ph, staff pharmacist, Pharmacy, recently received the Joe E. Smith Award, the highest recognition of excellence, from the Pennsylvania Society of Hospital Pharmacists (PSHP).

The award, established in 1988, essentially recognizes Cook as the best clinical pharmacist in the state and was given after an extensive nomination and review process involving candidates from throughout Pennsylvania.

Given annually by the society to the pharmacist who has contributed most to the practice of institutional pharmacy, the award emphasizes the increasingly important role clinical pharmacists play in patient therapy. Among his peers, Cook is recognized for particular expertise in nutritional support and pain management.

At Lehigh Valley Hospital, Cook has been instrumental in the development of various programs, including the mobile medication cart and a staff development program on parenteral nutrition. He serves as a member of the Medication Error Corrective Action Team and Pain Management Committees, and had an instrumental role in establishing the satellite pharmacy.

He devotes much of his spare time to profes-

Kids Learn Safety Tips From Staff Pharmacists

Pharmacists from Lehigh Valley Hospital, in conjunction with the Mideastern Pennsylvania Society of Hospital Pharmacists (MPSHP), have been presenting programs to elementary school children throughout the Lehigh Valley to teach about safe and appropriate use of medications.

The program, titled Katy's Kids, consists of a slide show and a pharmacist who uses the story of Katy the Kangaroo. Katy teaches her friends that medicine can be harmful if not used correctly.

Children are then given a Katy's Kid award certificate and a coloring book to supplement the program. Information is also sent home to parents.

"So far," says Greg Snyder, R Ph, "feedback from the schools has been positive — as well as the experience for the pharmacists." Program leaders are volunteers from the hospital staff, while the MPSHP provides the materials.

sional presentations on healthcare issues.

To achieve the award, Cook was first nominated by the Mideastern Pennsylvania Society of Hospital Pharmacists. Then a statewide review of nominees whittled the field to several finalists, from which the PSHP board of directors made the final selection.

Aerobic Duck shows off part of her newly hatched brood in a nest she fashioned next to the front door of the hospital Wellness Center. Employees watched with delight over a period of weeks, and were treated to watching eight ducklings hatch. After guarding her nest fiercely for a day, Ms. Duck and her brood vanished, presumably to a nearby stream. The folks at Community Health were unsuccessful in signing her up for post partum exercise classes.

Recreation Committee Salutes Department

The Recreation Committee this month began honoring a specific department for its contribution to Lehigh Valley Hospital. The group plans to recognize a different department on a monthly basis.

First chosen was Supply-Processing-Distribution, which has a staff of 60 to handle over 1,400 medical surgical supplies, replenishing supplies for patient care areas 16,000 times annually.

The SPD decontamination process plays a major role in infection control and sterility assurance. About 320,000 instrument trays and packs are assembled and processed each year, and some 45,000 pieces of patient care equipment are cleaned on an annual basis.

Safety Contest

As part of National Safety Week, June 6-12, the Safety Department plans to celebrate with a contest open to all employees, volunteers and medical staff.

It's hunting for a logo to use on all hospital safety materials. An assortment of prizes are offered, including T-shirts, coolers and athletic bags.

Emma Hooks, director, says it can be a combination of words or a graphic, and to make the contest interesting a whole variety of prizes are offered to would-be contestants.

There are few rules. Entries can come from departments or individuals, and any artwork doesn't have to be finely finished — just clear. Entries may be submitted in boxes to be found at both cafeterias during the week, and judging will follow.

All entrants need to do is add their name, department and a phone number to their contest entry.

National Safety Week was created in 1986 to draw attention to the role of safety and prevention in the workplace toward preventing accidents, reducing insurance costs, eliminating hazards and, of course, saving lives. Hooks says that over the past decade, safety programs have reduced the number of accidents by about 30 percent.

Rob Kochik, RN, director of clinical and hospital services, Delaware Valley Transplant Program, presents a certificate of appreciation to Irwin Greenberg, chair, board of trustees, Lehigh Valley Hospital. Looking on are Kathleen Romanick, Dorothy Wagner and Zigmont Viechnicki, all recent recipients of kidney and corneal tissue transplants at the hospital. The hospital was recognized for its support of the transplant program, which last year received organs from 210 donors that led to 656 organ transplants. That's the largest single number of organ donors in any one region in the nation.

Gourmet Panel Judges Recipe Contest

Champion soup, chicken and cookies topped the field in the recent Prestige Health recipe contest, supported by Lehigh Valley Hospital's Clinical Nutrition Service and Food Service Departments.

A number of area companies also supported the project, including Rodale Press, Inc.

What made the contest somewhat unusual was that entries were given a preliminary judging for nutritional quality by Jane Ziegler, director, Clinical Nutrition. Then the recipes were prepared by gourmet chefs and judged by an impressive panel.

Doing the cooking were executive chef Marvin Schmidt and chef Mike Mariner of the hospital staff. Judges included Dennis Bush, vice president, The Brass Rail; Anita Hirsh, RD, nutritionist, Rodale Press; Blake Morgan, chef, The Spice of Life; Alan Peters, chef, The Butternut Inn, and Bonnie Scott, director of training, The Wood Company. Mariner, Schmidt and Ziegler rounded out the panel.

One of the major criteria was to prove that low-fat cooking can be delicious, and several recipes included spices and vegetables to enhance flavor. But the judges also looked for the little touches that separates nice food from gourmet's delight — color, texture and presentation.

Topping the field for entrees was Italian Dijon Chicken from Pat Atno, a hospital employee. Second prize went to hospital volunteer J. Robert Van Anglen for his Broiled Chicken with Orange Sauce, and Prestige Health member Lucy Ann Levitsky and Van Anglen tied for third with her Buckwheat Coarse Kernel Kasha and his Honey Mustard Glazed Chicken.

Hearty Mountain Man Kettle Soup with Cheese Dumplings by employee Beverly Swoyer was the first place winner in the side dish/soup category. Sweet and Sour Carrots and Red Cabbage, from Kenneth G. Ryder, MD, was the second place prize winner, and third place went to Eileen Smith, Chemistry, for her Cheesy Veggie Casserole Italiano.

Prestige Health members Ann Borger and Mabel Heimer-Leyfert were saluted for their Heart Hardy Breakfast and Cream Sauce.

Vinegar Cookies, by Prestige Health member Jean Homanick, was the dessert winner, while Oh-So-Easy Cookies from Prestige Health member Thelma Warke took second place.

Zipper Club Seeks Members

The Zipper Club, an organization of former open heart patients who visit with Lehigh Valley Hospital cardiac patients to lend support, continue to seek additional members to work in that voluntary capacity.

Meanwhile, the group has assembled a booklet that describes itself, sources of services within the hospital, places to keep track of important information while a patient, low-fat recipes and a considerable amount of humor.

Additional information about the group may be obtained through Volunteer Services.

Roxanne Hassler, director of the Berks County Intermediate Unit; Ellwyn D. Spiker; and Ann Smith, president of the Eastern Region of Pennsylvania Association of Hospital Auxiliaries accepted distinguished service awards from the Burn Prevention Foundation.

Burn Foundation Presents Awards

Two agencies and one individual received distinguished service awards from the Burn Prevention Foundation at that organization's annual meeting and recognition dinner.

The Community Education Award went to the Eastern Region of the Pennsylvania Association of Hospital Auxiliaries (PAHA), while the Burn Safety in the Workplace Award was given to the Berks County Intermediate Unit Headstart Program.

Ellwyn D. Spiker, former chief executive officer of Lehigh Valley Hospital, received the John C. Thirion Award, given to an individual who has made a dramatic impact on the advancement of the prevention of burn injury through community awareness education.

Spiker played a key role in establishing the regional burn center in the hospital and served as the first chairman of the board of the Burn Prevention Foundation.

The Auxiliaries were recognized for the establishment of a Senior Citizens Fire and Burn Prevention Program. Between the 23 member auxiliaries and the Burn Foundation, the effort became the association's largest health promotion coalition in Pennsylvania.

Demonstrating leadership through pioneering creative and innovative burn safety training for and through employees was why the Berks County IU program was saluted. Teachers, teacher aides, administrators and even bus drivers received specialized training.

New Program Begins

The Metabolic Bone Disease Program was recently established to aid all physicians in the identification, evaluation, treatment and follow-up of their patients. Among the elements developed and standardized are referral for bone density measurement, specific biochemical profiling, anthropomorphic measurements, bone biopsy and analysis, treatment protocols and a manual of corrective exercises, impact loading exercises and activities for daily living.

The program functions as a private practice model, and is interested in all bone disease, acquired or genetic, including osteoporosis from a variety of causes, osteomalacias, Paget's disease and parathyroid disorders.

Additional information is available from ext. 6786.

Short Stay Name Change

On May 8, the Short Stay Unit at Cedar Crest & I-78 changed its name to 3C, part of the implementation of the Lastword information services system. Questions regarding the change may be directed to Julia Clelland, RN, at ext. 8228.
