

A poor showing without a hospital

The Morning Call

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarlyworks.lvhn.org/historicalarchives>

Part of the Medicine and Health Sciences Commons

Published In/Presented At

A poor showing without a hospital. (1896, May 5). The Morning Call.

This Newspaper is brought to you for free and open access by LVHN Scholarly Works. It has been accepted for inclusion in LVHN Scholarly Works by an authorized administrator. For more information, please contact LibraryServices@lvhn.org.

A Poor Showing Without a Hospital.
From the South Bethlehem Star.

An immense bazaar is being held in Allentown for the benefit of the hospital fund of that city. Great numbers of citizens of the city are interested in it, and are contributing largely of their time and their money to make it a success. Many Allentownians realize that, having reached the dignity of a city, it makes a very poor showing without a hospital. To be obliged to send its sick and suffering to a neighboring town seems rather out of keeping with a city which rather prides itself upon its ability to do everything and anything that any other city in the United States can do. And so we trust that a stately hospital may rear its head in Allentown in the not distant future and that the energetic ladies who planned the bazaar now being held may be able to add thousands of dollars to the hospital fund. Incidentally we are glad that there is a prospect, even if remote, of relieving our own St. Luke's of its great press of patients.