ALLENTOWN, PA., FEB. 2, 1899.

THE ALLENTOWN HOSPITAL.

It is gratifying news to the people of Allentown, and particularly to the "Morning Call," that work on the hospital is progressing at a satisfactory rate, and it will not be long before the institution will be doing its work of mercy.

In this connection it may not be amiss to remind those who have pledged money to the hospital but have not as yet paid it over, that this is an appropriate time to do so. The trustees need the money to complete the building.

And, by the way, we believe that there are a great many people in Allentown who have done nothing whatever for this much-needed institution; people who are amply able to do so, and who would derive as much benefit from the hospital as any one. The people of Allentown should take pride in their hospital. It required a large amount of patient work to bring it under way, but now that it is an assured fact the citizens of Allentown should see to it that there is nothing lacking, nothing left undone to make it one of the model hospitals in the state.
